BIBLIOGRAPHY OF AGRICULTURE

Vol. 29

February 1965

No. 2

The Bibliography of Agriculture is an index to the literature of agriculture and the allied sciences received in the National Agricultural Library. Publications from any country are indexed, provided they are in one of the languages shown in CAPITALS at bottom of this column, or have summaries or abstracts in one of those languages.

Literature received more than one year after publication is generally not indexed. Exceptions are made for important scientific publications.

Indexing of articles on the processing of agricultural products is limited to those on primary processing.

Unsigned articles and those signed with pseudonyms or initials, editorials, letters to the editor, and columns appearing regularly, are omitted.

FORMAT

The Bibliography is a classified arrangement of references under the following subjects:

Plant Science
Soils and Fertilizers
Forestry
Animal Industry
Entomology
Agricultural Engineering
Agricultural Products
Agricultural Economics and
Rural Sociology
Food and Human Nutrition

New Periodicals and Serials
Translations
USDA Publications
State Agricultural Experiment
Station Publications
State Agricultural Extension
Service Publications
Food and Agriculture Organization
of the UN (FAO) Publications

The last section of each monthly issue is the Personal and Organizational index for that issue.

ANNOUNCEMENT

During the past few years several changes have been made in the Bibliography of Agriculture. The purpose of this announcement is threefold: (1) to invite your opinions of these changes already made; (2) to inform you of other changes currently under consideration; and (3) to urge that you assist us in making the Bibliography of Agriculture more meaningful and useful to you.

The major change was the mechanization of the author indexes, as announced in the August, 1964 issue. Because of machine limitations we decided to list personal names separately from names of societies, institutions and other corporate bodies. We are particularly anxious to know whether this arrangement serves you.

The next step in the mechanization of the Bibliography of Agriculture is the production of monthly and annual subject indexes by computer. Our target date for these indexes is January, 1966. We believe these indexes will constitute the greatest breakthrough to date in the provision of information to the agricultural-biological community through the Bibliography of Agriculture. The broad subject approach to the literature as provided by the Bibliography's classification scheme will be supplemented by the detailed subject breakdown made possible by the subject index. Those of you who frequently use the annual (December) index issue will find nothing new in this statement. However, up to now you have always had to wait until the December issue was published to make a thorough search for citations in the Bibliography of Agriculture through the detailed subject-index approach. When this phase of the National Agricultural Library's Mechanization Program is effected, you will be able to use this approach to each monthly issue as it comes out.

While the above changes will make the classified list easier to use, we still need to know how we can improve our classification scheme, our coverage, and our subject-indexing methods to serve fully the needs of agricultural-biological research. Those of you who use the Bibliography of Agriculture can give us this information. What subjects need to be covered more fully? What journals not now indexed should be indexed? How much more detailed indexing should be employed in each subject field?

The National Agricultural Library has organized an Agricultural Vocabulary Project in order to keep up with changes in the agricultural-biological terminology. This project will unify the retrieval terms used in the indexes to the Bibliography of Agriculture and in the Public Catalog of the Library. We expect to publish the completed list and hope that it will be used as a standard for indexing agricultural material by all who are in the business of providing agricultural and biological information. Comments from Bibliography of Agriculture users on its annual subject index terms would greatly assist us in meeting these goals.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF AGRICULTURE

Vol. 29

March 1965

No. 3

The Bibliography of Agriculture is an index to the literature of agriculture and the allied sciences received in the National Agricultural Library. Publications from any country are indexed, provided they are in one of the languages shown in CAPITALS at bottom of this column, or have summaries or abstracts in one of those languages.

Literature received more than one year after publication is generally not indexed. Exceptions are made for important scientific publications.

Indexing of articles on the processing of agricultural products is limited to those on primary processing.

Unsigned articles and those signed with pseudonyms or initials, editorials, letters to the editor, and columns appearing regularly, are omitted.

FORMAT

The Bibliography is a classified arrangement of references under the following subjects:

Plant Science
Soils and Fertilizers
Forestry
Animal Industry
Entomology
Agricultural Engineering
Agricultural Products
Agricultural Economics and
Rural Sociology
Food and Human Nutrition
Miscellaneous

The classified section is followed by the listing of:

New Periodicals and Serials
Translations
USDA Publications
State Agricultural Experiment
Station Publications
State Agricultural Extension
Service Publications
Food and Agriculture Organization
of the UN (FAO) Publications

The last section of each monthly issue is the Personal and Organizational index for that issue.

Foreign language titles of articles in serial publications are given in English only. The language of the text is shown in abbreviated form in parentheses at the end of the title. The following notations are used:

Abbreviated names of the publications cited prior to July 1, 1964 are those from USDA Miscellaneous Publication 765—List of Serials Currently Received in the Library of the United States Department of Agriculture, July 1, 1957. Abbreviated names of all new periodical titles received after July 1, 1964, are taken from the American Standard for Periodical Title Abbreviations. As time allows, abbreviations set up for titles before that date will be converted to the new form.

The presence of the term "Ref." in the citation indicates that the article contains ten or more references to the literature.

Following each citation is the Library classification number which should be used when requesting loans or reproduction of articles.
